The Botanical Gardens, in Hong Kong, are situated near Government House, and are tastefully laid out in terraces, slopes, and walks, with parterres of flowers. A handsome fountain adorns the second terrace, and there is a bandstand, some aviaries, orchid houses, and ferneries. A bronze statue of Sir Arthur Kennedy, Governor of the Colony, 1872-6, stands above the second terrace, looking down on the fountain.

Hope you have had a good passage across. Things are very quiet here all said and done. Kind regards.
